ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A signal processing apparatus includes a device for converting a data stream containing audio packs into packets each having a given area assigned to real data. The audio packs store PCM

5   multiple-channel audio contents information. Another device operates for enabling channel information and a portion of the audio contents information to be placed in adjacent portions of the given area respectively. The channel information corresponds to the portion of the audio contents information.